SINGLE BLESSEDNESS.

A Contented Old Maid Discus the Marriage Question.

A Few Prominent Hints on the Education of Girls-Marriage a Sad Lottery and, at the Best, a State Full of Cares, Worry and Anxieties.

I have met with very few unmarried ladies who have not appeared to me to feel, after the age of thirty, that their existence was thoroughly comfortless and wretched, writes an "Old Maid" in the New York Ledger. Many have I heard express themselves thus openly; and that such is the fact can very easily be learned by an accurate observer of the human countenance. It is also certain that three out of every five of the young ladies of the present day must remain unmarried, because so many young men think they can not exist on less than two thousand a year when married; and how few men there are with two thousand a year compared with the number of young ladies in the country! There are sometimes five, six, eight girls in one family; generally all tolerably pretty, and most of them pleasing and accomplished women-many possessing talents of no ordinary stampyet, perhaps, in our drawing rooms these lovely and accomplished beings are completely neglected by the other sex, "be-cause" (I must repeat the sentiments I have heard from thousands of young men of fashion) "I never talk to girls. I dare not pay attention to unmarried women, because I am not a marrying man; my friend, flirted with so-and-so, and was accused of behaving improperly. I don't like to ex-cite false hopes; I shall never marry, unless I can find a wife with at least two or three thousand a year, because I am much richer unmarried with the small fortune I have." It is of no use to quarrel with the state of society as it is at present constituted, for we can not alter it; but I think it might be beneficial to give a few hints on the educa-tion of women, which might perhaps be useful in procuring them, in a state of single blessedness, as it is very falsely called, a greater share of happiness, or a less load of misery, than they at present ap-ear to me to possess after the awful age of A girl at thirty is called an old maid. She goes to a ball, and generally sits neglected all the evening, or dance with some gentleman who has been asked often to dine at her father's house, and who, perhaps, re-marks: "Miss—is rather passec—a good old girl-and I must do my duty there; and now I shall dance with the beautiful Miss -...' My heart always bleeds for the mortifications I see endured by these poor old girls continually. There are certainly some single women whose talents have made them as much considered in society as they ought to be; but, then, I have generally ob served that they have fortunes, or had advantages above others to bring them into notice, and to give to the natural ambition of the human species some scope of

I will suppose a case in which there are four girls-a moderate proportion in one -and two sons; and I will suppose their father possesses five thousand a year. I will suppose one of the four young ladies very pretty, one tolerably pretty and the other two rather plain. They have been ed-ucated, in all probability, as the greater proportion of American girls are. First of all they go every Sunday to church, and are moderately rich, perfectly honorable, up-right and well principled. It is only for their own happiness that I would propose any change in the education of a class for whom I entertain so high a respect.

These four young ladies have all been brought up with the idea that they will become wives and mothers, and are taught to cherish these natural affections which, if by some remote chance one out of the four ever does marry, will make her so amiable and lovely as a married woman. They are all allowed to read modern novels, at least all such as are considered to have a moral tendency. Now, I maintain that there is scarcely one of these works which does not impress any young woman with the idea that happiness can alone be found in love

The heroine is very amiable and perfect, surrounded with is the novel which represents four poor, pretty, unnoticed girls, who are destined to pass their young years without so much as one admirer amongst them! Year beauty fade-and my four levely and accomplished warm-hearted beings, having seen all their youthful castles fall one by one, become listless and unhappy. They have little in life to interest them; one dies of a complaint of the spine; another lives many years on arrow-root and calf's-foot jelly, and is enveloped in flannel even in July; a third is under the care of a Dr. S. for indigestion; and, perhaps, the fourth, who is made of tougher materials and born with less feeling than the others—or, perhaps, from having some-thing to occupy her mind, in preparing the arrow-root for one sister and ordering the hard dumplings prepared by Dr. S. for the other-outlives her sorrows and disappointments; and, if she takes an interest in her brother's children, or a share in their edu-cation, or in something which gives vent to those affections which are implanted by nature in the breast of woman, she becomes

This, then, appears to me to be the se-cret too much neglected in female educaone great source of happiness consists in the indulgence of virtuous affection; but do not teach them that there is no affection capable of producing this happiness ex-cept such as may be feit for a lover or husband. If the heart be properly regulated it may take a warm and sufficiently engrossing interest in many objects less inti-mately connected with it. Marriage is a sad lottery, and, at the best, is a state full of cares and anxieties. Freedom and inde-pendence ought not to be lightly parted with, or set down as possessions of little

A TELEGRAPHER'S YARNS.

Some Queer Mistakes in Which Dots and Dashes Have Figured. I spent last evening with a gentleman who at one time was a Western Union operator and he told me a good many things in regard to this mode of transmitting thought by electricity, which both interested and amused me, says a writer in the Philadelphia Press:

"It is wonderful," said he, "how much imperfect knowledge and misconception there is in regard to this subject. One day during the time I was operator at a small station in the northern portion of this State, a lady friend apologized to me for faults, etc., in a telegram she had sent me, offering the excuse that it was the first time she had ever sent one. I assured her, of course, that there was no occasion to apologize, since the original document did not, of course, come into my hands. On another occasion an old lady came into the office and presented me with a telegram duly ad-dressed. I immediately began to open it. 'What are you about?' she exclaimed in surprise. I explained to her as politely as I knew how that it would be impossible to send the message without first seeing it. 'Then,' she replied, giving me a piercing look, 'hand it back to me. Do you suppose I'm going to let you read my private affairs! I'd somer not send it at all.' And she left the office in high dudgeon.

"While there are comparatively few people so ignorant of the workings of the tele-Occasionally quite amusing ignorance is displayed by people one would think should address by mail mail will Address Wichita EaGLE, With I Eagle office and milk. In front of the window there must be flowers, and several fine trees before the door, and, if Heaven grant me so great a joy, six or occasionally, also, from the imperfect writing of the receiving operators. You have, the trees."

Only 223 round trip to Denver, Pueble and Colorado Springs, and Six Dround trip to Denver, Pueble and Colorado Springs, and of course, heard the story of the famous doctor who was sent on a fruitless journey by receiving a telegram worded: 'Don't come too late.' As originally handed into the telegraph office the message read: 'Don't come, too late;' but in the trans-mission the signal denoting the comma was mission the signal denoting the comma was mitted, and hence the great inconvenience the recipient was put to. "I made quite a bad mistake myself once which impressed upon my mind very forci-bly the importance of being very careful. In the office in which I was then working there was still one of the old Morse instru ments. A Harrisburg firm sent to one of their country agents: 'Send rails ten feet lengths.' Now, the letters 't' and 'c' are in the Morse code represented by a dash (—) and a dot (.) respectively; but in transmitting the message the instrument in recording the word 'ten' signaled two dots instead of a dash and a dot, and the word was thereby converted into 'in,' the mes-sage reading: 'Send rails in foot lengths.' "I once saw a book in which an operator some of the mistakes made in the transmission of messages, but I have forgotten most of them now. I will recall as many as I

"An old gentleman who had left his wig in the train and desired it searched for, had his message so unmercifully changed by either the sending or receiving operator that the word 'wig' became 'wife' the telegram was received at the destina tion. Diligent inquiry and search was of course made for the missing lady, but without avail. Another story tells of exactly the reverse happening. A gentleman being detained out on business' telegraphed for his wife, but was strangely surprised and mortified to receive by the next train his wig' instead.

"A strange mutilation of a telegram, hardly to be accounted for, happened where an operator to a small station was surprised to take from his instrument a telegram addressed to the 'Master of Miseries.' He was, of course, very much puzzied how to effect its delivery until it suddenly dawned upon his mind that it was intended for the Master or Mistress' of a school in the "A large number of erroneous messages which pass over the telegraph can be attributed directly to bad penmanship of the sender. For instance, the person who telegraphed to the broker with reference to cor-tain stocks which he desired to have transferred was alone responsible for the mutila-tion which occurred in his message, in which, with graphic brevity, he described the trans feree as of 'Largo, Fife. widow.' The bro ker received it as a 'large, fine widow.' this connection I am reminded of being in Benjamin Harris Brewster's office on one occasion when a messenger boy came in and handed him a message which he had written and sent to the telegraph office but a few minutes before, and as he did so, said: 'Mr. Brewster, the operator wants you to read this.' The ex-Attorney-General looked hastily up from a law paper in which he had been absorbed, and seizing the bit of paper, scanned it critically for a moment and then said in a loud and angry tone of voice; Who the duce wrote this at any rate!' No wonder the operator had given it up in de-

Not a few marriages have taken place between telegraphists, the courtship hav-ing been carried on through the medium of the wires. Nor need you wonder that Hymen sometimes plays a part when I tell you that a certain love code exists, known only to the parties most interested, and it is even possible for a sentimental operator to transmit a kiss instantaneously. I have

"On one occasion I also knew it to be used for a very different thing from making love. It was in 1882, and I was spending my summer vacation with my uncle, who lives near Williamsport, Pa. a very large house, and my room was on the third floor. One night about two o'clock I was suddenly awakened by hearing a faint ticking which sounded not very unlike a telegraph instrument, only it was more indistinct "In an instant, from the force of habit, I was wide awake, although it took me at least half a minute before I realized that I was not in my office and had been called over the wire. I listened and the ticking began again. 'Come up; all right,' is what I heard. I pinched myself to make sure I was not dreaming, but I again heard the ticking. 'Come,' is what it said this time. I jumped out of bed, and seizing my revolver, started toward the door. As I did so I heard some one rapidly running down the stairs. I opened the door and randown the steps, and reached the sitting-room just in time to see some one jump through the window and run. From the each of the rapidly-retreating foot-steps I could tell that there were two pairs of legs. Burglars had pried open the window and got into the house. One of them had evidently come up-stairs and given his companion on the second floor the telegraphic signal to come up, which meant that the coast was clear, and that all the occupants of the house were asieep."

A Practical Joke Which Came Near Ending in a Tragedy. A young physician went to see his cousin, an army officer, out upon the great plains. The officer was given to practical jokes, and the young doctor, being a genuine "tender-foot," was a most promising subject. One morning, says the Youth's Companion, the host gravely proposed an elephant hunt "What," said the doctor, "do you have elephants out here!"

"Pienty of them," replied the host. Preparations were at once begun, and by nine c'clock a party of youngsters, ripe for the fun, were after elephants. When about five or six miles from the post the doctor was sent through a thicket of "wait-a-bit" thorns, of which he knew nothing. Anticipating rare sport at his plight on his return the host sat on his horse waiting, when he heard a shot and was startled by loud cries for help.
